Dear Valued Customer:

This serves as a second update to the recently published KAG position on handling Ultra Low Sulfur Diesel (ULSD).

KAG received word late last week that the American Petroleum Institute (API) has issued a slightly modified color/symbol coding standard for identifying product storage tanks. Please review the attached API produced document and note the new symbol for ULSD.

As previously requested, our preference is for our customers to identify their unloading tanks using a written (in English) product identification tag. However, in addition to a securely placed product identification tag, we also welcome the use of the API color/symbol coding system as a backup identifier.

If you have any questions or comments regarding this update or any other ULSD related issue, please contact your KAG representative or e-mail us at sales@thekag.com.

Sincerely,
